Simple, sturdy but poetic at the same time...

These alabaster votives tick all these boxes, don't they?

This type of stone is known since the pharaohs in Egypt and was found in the old city Alabastron.

The local craftsmen have inherited their skills to work with this stone over many generations and thousands of years.

Its yellowish white colour is the perfect natural and soft shade for a candle.

Mix and match the different sizes for an interesting and authentic display on your table.

Alabaster is a porous stone.

That's why the candlelight shines through it so beautifully.

Because of this it could also happen that melted candle wax can leak through the material causing it to stick to the surface.
